

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. JEFF MILLER

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, January 27, 2009

Mr. MILLER of Florida. Madam Speaker, rollcall vote No. 30 was a suspension vote on agreeing to the resolution H. Res. 31—A resolution expressing support for designation of January 28, 2009, as “National Data Privacy Day.” If present, I would have voted rollcall vote No. 30—“yea.”

Rollcall vote no. 31 was a suspension vote on agreeing to the resolution H. Res. 84—A resolution honoring the heroic actions of the pilot, crew, and rescuers of US Airways Flight 1549. If present, I would have voted rollcall vote No. 31—“yea.”

THE CONGRESSIONAL ANTI-SLAVERY CHAMPION OF 2008

HON. CAROLYN B. MALONEY

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, January 27, 2009

Mrs. MALONEY. Madam Speaker, I rise today to read into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD remarks made by Dorchen Leidholdt, Director of Center for Battered Women's Legal Services at Sanctuary for Families, regarding my selection as the Congressional Anti-Slavery Champion of 2008:

On behalf of the Coalition Against Trafficking in Women, an international NGO fighting human trafficking since 1988, and Sanctuary for Families, a New York City-based provider of services to victims of domestic violence, I am delighted to join other leaders of the New York State Anti-Trafficking Coalition in saluting Congresswoman Carolyn Maloney, the Congressional Anti-Slavery Champion of 2008. Congresswoman Maloney's enduring and dedicated advocacy on behalf of victims of human trafficking is unparalleled in the halls of Congress. Over and over she has demonstrated her profound understanding of the harm of human trafficking, gleaned primarily from her compassion, respectful attention to the testimony of survivors, and her acute awareness of what it takes to stop this horrific crime and severe human rights violation.

Thanks to Congresswoman Maloney's visionary leadership, it is widely recognized that stopping trafficking requires both strong measures to curtail the demand for prostitution and well-crafted criminal provisions that enable prosecutors to put traffickers out of business—permanently.

Ken Franzblau has focused on the critically important role Congresswoman Maloney has played in the drafting and passage of the William Wilberforce Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2008, which enhances protections to victims while strengthening the ability of prosecutors to hold traffickers accountable. Thanks to Congresswoman Maloney's inspiring leadership, the 2008 Reauthorization continues the important advances made by the previous two Reauthorizations.

While we celebrate the achievements of the 2008 Reauthorization, our task of strengthening our federal anti-trafficking law is not over; critically important work remains to be done in two important areas. Through her exemplary work in the House of Representatives, in the draft that she shepherded there to close to unanimous approval, Congresswoman Maloney, has pointed the way to two critically important goals that lie ahead. First, the obstacles of proving force, fraud, or coercion, while eased under specific circumstances by the 2008 Reauthorization, continue to stymie the effective prosecution of many sex traffickers. Going forward we must ensure that sex traffickers are never provided a loophole, because their trafficking was not provably ‘severe.’

Second, sex tour operators fuel the demand for sex trafficking worldwide by sending plane loads of affluent American men to the poorest countries in the world to buy the bodies of women and girls in prostitution. While Congresswoman Maloney succeeded in including such a provision in New York State's landmark anti-trafficking law (the strongest state anti-trafficking law in the nation), and saw to it that the House draft reauthorization contained it, the compromise that resulted in the 2008 Reauthorization does not include a provision criminalizing sex tour operators.

We must ensure that the next TVPA Reauthorization criminalizes sex trafficking per se and makes it a federal crime to operate a sex tour business. With Congresswoman Maloney leading the campaign, I am confident that we will accomplish these two remaining goals.

Congresswoman Maloney, on behalf of the Coalition Against Trafficking in Women and Sanctuary for Families, our congratulations on receiving this well-deserved recognition and our heartfelt thanks for your invaluable leadership in the battle to end human trafficking.

IN MEMORY OF ROGER BONE

HON. BOB ETHERIDGE

OF NORTH CAROLINA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, January 27, 2009

Mr. ETHERIDGE. Madam Speaker, I rise today in recognition of the life and achievements of Roger Bone, a former North Carolina legislator and a good friend to me and to all of Nash County. He died on January 25, 2009, after battling cancer for many months. He will be sorely missed.

Roger and I shared parallel lives in many ways. He grew up on a tobacco farm, like I did, and like me was first elected to the state legislature in 1978. It was a pleasure to have him as a friend and partner in my early legislative career.

He quickly rose through the General Assembly to become chairman of the House Banks and Thrift Institutions Committee, where he served with distinction until 1981. In 1987, he started his own lobbying business, Bone and Associates, which has been among the most influential firms in North Carolina. Last year, the N.C. Center for Public Policy recognized him as the number one lobbyist in the state, and he was also one of the most well-liked. People knew they could trust Roger, and his influence was a credit to his honesty, hard work, and easy humor.

Last June, Roger received the Order of the Long Lead Pine, the highest honor our state gives to our native sons and daughters. I can think of no one who is more deserving of North Carolina's respect and admiration.

Roger's family shared his love of Nash County and commitment to public service with his family. His lovely wife Reba was an elementary and middle school principal, and his son, Fred, was his partner in Bone and Associates. In addition to his wife and son, he is survived by two grandsons, Jacob and Caleb; his father, Winslow; and two brothers and a sister.

It was my honor to be asked to offer the following eulogy at the funeral of this great man.

It is an honor to take part in this memorial service for my good friend Roger. I wish I could be there today with you to honor and remember Roger. However, today in the House of Representatives we are taking a critical vote to help our economy recover from its current downturn, and I will be thinking of Roger as I take today's votes. I will be thinking of his love of politics and legislation, and his many years in the arena, and I know he would understand, and Reba and his family understand, but I still wish I could be with you.

There is not a person here who doesn't know how Roger Bone loved Nash County and loved serving his community in the legislature. He was not only a student of politics, but he was a practitioner all his life. I remember that when he gave Reba her engagement ring, they didn't celebrate with dinner, they went to watch the General Assembly, so you know that politics was really in his bones.

As most of you know, he was ranked the top lobbyist in North Carolina last year, and he was so successful because he truly cared about people. In his work, he made friends, not enemies; knowing that those who were not with him today could be his partner tomorrow. Roger was a good friend to me, as he was to many of you. He could be calm in the midst of a storm. No matter what—the commotion of business, the furor of political debate—he was always steady, always smiling, always a reliable partner and friend.

I count it a distinct blessing that we were freshman members of the General Assembly together and I will never forget that year. In 1979, we were part of a group of ‘Liston's Boys’: Roger, myself, Martin Lancaster, Paul Pulley, and others. As roommates at the Brownstone Hotel, Roger and I spent many late hours talking about our new roles and the politics of the House. My fondest memories were the early mornings. Even though we both grew up on a farm, Roger never appreciated my getting up early in the morning to go running. As I was heading out, my stirring would wake up Roger while he was still trying to finish his sleep. Then, I would wake him up again when I got back.

However, the work ethic he gained from farm life served him well in the General Assembly and in the rest of his life. His positive attitude contributed to his success in everything he did. Everyone who knew him liked him, and everyone who worked with him liked him as well. It says a lot about him that he could always laugh at himself, and in the toughest of times if you can laugh you'll be alright.

While this is a sad day for all of us, it would be wise of us to remember the words of the great artist, Leonardo da Vinci, who said on the death of a friend, “As a well-spent day brings happy sleep, so a life well used brings a happy death.” Roger used his life well, and Nash County, and the State of North Carolina are better due to his efforts. I am better because I knew him, as are we all. Thank you for allowing me to be part of this remembrance.
